Sunshine Parsonage

The Deacons and Elders have decided to raze the congregation's parsonage. The parsonage has been home to several ministers and families of the Sunshine congregation. The building was originally a church building.

The Sunshine congregation originally purchased the building, which was formerly a Methodist church, in 1923. Worship services were held in the building for 45 years until our current building was completed in 1968. David Lindsey Coriell delivered the final sermon in the church saying, "I am an old preacher in an old building delivering an old message." Following the transition to our current building, the old church building was converted to a parsonage. It has been used as such until this past summer when the Rileys moved into their new home. This structure, in one form or another, has been utilized by the Sunshine congregation for 91 years.

The decision to raze the parsonage was made for practical and financial reasons. There are three very expensive issues which make it unfeasible for someone else to inhabit the structure as it is: the roof is in great need of replacement, there are complex drainage problems, and a completely new septic system would need be purchased and installed. Given these circumstances and our intent to maintain possession of the land, we decided to do away with the building itself rather than have it fall into further disrepair.

Gary Glispie is the lead Deacon for this project. Gary has a good deal of experience in this type of work. He is working through a contractor to salvage anything of value associated with the building. The plan is for the contractor to remove all materials from the site, level-fill the area and seed to grass. We anticipate the actual razing taking place within the coming weeks.

If you have any general questions or concerns, you can direct those to any of the Elders or Deacons. If you have any specific questions about the razing process or about any item or material associated with the building, see Gary Glispie.

Remember that in the Annex on the wall we have a rack of very nice cards to send out free of charge. If you will fill out and address the card, lay it on the counter in the office, we will put the stamp on and see that it gets mailed.
