All

I've got studs down in my basement that have been waiting for me to put the rest of the drywall on them for well over a year. I've got dry-wall in my garage waiting to be put on the studs. I have all the resources I need to move on with this project but still it sits, or maybe I am the one that is sitting.

"Cast all your anxiety on him because he cares for you." (1 Peter 5:11).

I have heard this verse, read this verse and even sung a children's song based on this verse but there is one thing I didn't catch until now. One three lettered word- "ALL." Unfortunately, I think I too often leave out the "all" when I cast my anxiety on God. I turn some things over to him, but I catch myself hanging onto a lot of it as well. I don't know why, but there it hangs, like some badge of honor. Except, the badge weighs as much as a 50 lb. sack of taters—bearable, but it will wear you down if you carry it all the time. And all the time I have the means to get rid of it. Of course, God knows his children, which is why He inspired Peter to write the verse before this one, because until we do it, we cannot hope to "cast all..."

"Humble yourselves, therefore, under God's mighty hand, that he may lift you up in due time." (1 Peter 5:10)

Humbling ourselves to the point of being able to cast all of our anxieties on him is not easy. I guess it is because it makes us feel like we are out of control. Therefore, to do it we need to recognize this fact—in our spiritual lives, just like my basement, we have all we need to be complete. We just need to use our Resource. God asks us to cast all of our burdens on him simply because "He cares for us." Also notice the word "cast," which tells me we should get our anxieties away from us as far and as fast as we can. His taking off our worries and cares is one of the many ways He lifts us up. Furthermore, He is able to solve our problems in ways we wouldn't dream of until He does it and makes it look easy. I guess that is just part of being God. Part of being his child is to humble ourselves to the point where we stop sitting, start casting, and move on with our lives.
