Social Media has devolved into an environment where people feel free to share whatever is on their mind without running their words through a filter. Instead of a safe playground to interact with friends, social media has become dangerous and toxic. Not all the time, mind you. But a good portion of the time. Anger. Frustration. Hatred. Divisiveness. Slander. Shaming. All of which fuel the woke/called-out culture. Like the meme says, "I'm just as surprised as you are by what comes out of my mouth."

To counter, someone created the T.H.I.N.K. paradigm to help provide a filter, not only for social media but for all our words. The T.H.I.N.K. acronym asks five questions based on the letters for think.

Is It True? The erosion/corrosion of truth in our society is well documented and I won't use space to rehash that now. However, even with good source material to fact check information, we seem to be more concerned with our own agenda and not seeking truth.

Is It Helpful? It's one thing to post ideas and concepts for consideration. But a very thin line is present to post for simply to stir things up. Like lighting a fire cracker just to watch everyone's reactions, some post to watch Social Media explode. Instead of helping move the story forward, it becomes a show in and of itself.

Is It Inspiring? If what is posted does not help people, then it's safe to say that it won't inspire either. When our emotions overtake us, and when we're driven by negative feelings, what we say or post will not inspire anyone. When posting to stir the pot or for combative purposes, then driving a wedge between others is the only inspiration, and it's not very inspiring.

Is It Necessary? The fact that one may need to hit the pause button before posting or speaking may be a big clue to stop forward progress. Since experience tells us that we will not move the ideological needle, then it's like a futile experience.

Is It Kind? Maybe the biggest question to ask hits at the kindness meter. Since too much social media is filled with anything but kindness, maybe we need to make sure otherwise. Let's find new ways to encourage one another online

In the Likeness of Jesus

I stood in front of the mirror one morning to comb my hair. As I raised the comb to my temple, I saw my mother's face in my reflection. People often tell me I look like her, but on that morning it was clear to me too. My small eyes, round nose, and cheekbones were inherited from my mother. I was so moved by our uncanny resemblance that I sat down to write the this poem:

"The matter is out of my hands.

I am my mother— all over again."

To see my mother in my very own features called to mind Scriptures in Genesis. They tell us we are made in the divine likeness of God and His Son. Because we are created so, the Lord should see Himself in the way we work our jobs, love the people in our communities and care for our families.

Jesus told the disciples to be like Him and emulate Him. He said "I have set you an example that you should do as I have done for you." (John 13:15 NIV).

Each day, as we live to meet our personal needs and the needs of our families, there is also the body of Christ that deserves our attention and care.

Responding like Jesus, Where can we offer service or kindness to someone else? For us as believers created in the Lord's image, loving others is our family crest, and Jesus is trusting that our neighbors will encounter His love in our eyes, and through the actions in our lives.

The five questions that help shape or shift our paradigm only work so far as we're willing to stop to ask the questions, then honestly answer them. Sounds complicated, especially since rules may offer a guide to holy behavior, but they'll never transform people's lives. Something more needs to happen.

Paul exhorts the Philippians to have the mind or attitude of Christ (2:5). While contextually, he's talking about humility and unity, the broader principle is for his followers to think and act like Jesus. Beyond a simple or mimic WWJD formula, Jesus calls us to be him to the public. So when we speak or post on social media the message beyond the post is the redeeming work of Jesus in our lives. We don't add to the toxicity of social media, we try to allow Jesus to redeem it. Cheerful. Supportive. Respectful. Harmonious. Complimentary. Honor. Silence. For Jesus himself once posted, "You are the light of the world" (Mt. 5:16). It's time to let it shine.

Soli Deo Gloria!
(i.e., only God is glorified!)

Have a wonderful day!
