Put on the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places. Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand.

Ephesians 6:11-13 KJV

After the Civil War ended, Major Edmund Ross returned to Kansas and resumed his career as a newspaper editor. When one of Kansas' senators died, Ross was appointed to the Senate to replace him. His most important act in the Senate was during the impeachment trial of Andrew Johnson in 1868. Ross was expected to vote with his party to remove the President, but did not believe he was guilty.

Later describing the moment when the Chief Justice called on him to cast his vote Ross said, "I looked into my open grave. Friendships, position, fortune, and everything that makes life desirable to an ambitious man were about to be swept away by the breath of my mouth, perhaps forever." He voted not guilty, and the impeachment failed by one vote. As expected his political career was ended, but Ross had courageously stood for what he believed was right despite the heavy pressure of others.

While there are times when we are blessed to have others encouraging us to do what is right, there are also times when we must stand no matter what others say or do. Truth is still truth and right is still right, and no amount of pressure should be able to deter us from standing firm.

The temptation to go along with the crowd or water down the message to be acceptable to a wider range of people is great, but it must be resisted. God is calling us to stand without wavering, courageously committing to doing what is right no matter what. That is what courage in action does. Standing firm for what is right does not depend on public opinion or the support of others, but on God.
